

FORWARD IN REUNION OF YORK

OF BROTHER

Canada Assents Verdict

By THOMAS WATLING
Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin
OTTAWA, Dec. 10.—Canada will assent to the abdication of King Edward VIII. The Canadian cabinet has authorized the sanction by Canada of the British legislation with respect to the King's abdication. The statute of Westminster provides that Dominion must assent to any change in the succession and as the Canadian parliament cannot meet until Jan. 14 the cabinet has given the necessary authority which will later be given by Parliament.

Premier King declined to reveal his communications with Premier Baldwin until there has been further consultation among the Dominion premiers.

The Dominion cabinet today passed an order-in-council which was approved by the Governor-General authorizing the British government to include Canada in the act of acceptance of the King's abdication which the British parliament will pass.

This action has been taken under section four of the Statute of Westminster which makes a provision that such procedure will avoid the necessity of immediately assembling the Canadian parliament. The action will be ratified when parliament meets in January.

The abdication will necessitate a new commission for the Governor-General and immediately the British parliament passes the bill confirming the abdication and King Edward takes over the entire cabinet will have to be reformed. King Edward remains on the throne until the abdication is ratified by the British house.

No immediate announcement will be made of the details of Canada's part in the negotiations which led up to the abdication.

HOUSE SITS TO CONSIDER LEGISLATION

Reconvenes to Make Abdication Effective—Attlee Praises Edward

LONDON, Dec. 10.—The House of Commons reconvened at 8 p.m. tonight (11 a.m. M.S.T.) to consider legislation which would make King Edward's abdication effective.

Clement Attlee, leader of the opposition, was cheered when he arose to address the members.

"This occasion does not, in my view, call for long and eloquent speeches," Attlee said.

"My words will be few and simple. We will all bear with profound respect the message from the King.

The King has decided he can no longer continue on the throne. The whole country will receive the news with the deepest sorrow and his subjects in these islands and throughout the British dominions beyond the seas will feel a sense of personal loss."

SYMPATHY OF ALL
"I am certain that throughout these anxious days he has had the sympathy of all in the tragic dilemma with which he has been placed. This is due not only to the nature of the dilemma involving the strongest human emotions but to the personal affection he has inspired in his people."

No British monarch has been so well known to his subjects. People not only in this country but throughout the commonwealth and the empire have seen in him not a distant ruler—but a man who has been personally acquainted with him and he has visited places where many of them have lived.

"We all know of his personal charm, courage and his sympathy with suffering. We on this side of the Atlantic are proud to be associated with him."

LONDON, Dec. 10.—Edward, said a report received by the Exchange Telegraph Agency, intends to leave the country, probably tomorrow night. There was no indication where he would meet Mrs. Simpson or when they will marry. The Duke of York, it was learned, has made no final decision so far concerning his title.

LOVE OF KING FOR DIVORCEE SENDS HIM TO COURT

LONDON, Dec. 10.—King Edward VIII abdicated today and was succeeded on the throne by his brother, the Duke of York. Abdication was announced in the House of Commons by Capt. Edward Algernon Fitzroy, Speaker of the House.

The dramatic move climaxed a week of tension since Britain has not known since the days of the Great War.

The King's love for Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson, American-born divorcee, was the reason for his abdication.

Around the globe, through sun and down, to those who bear allegiance to Britain's King, flashed this message from their sovereign: IRREVOCABLE DECISION

"After long and anxious consideration, I have determined to renounce the throne to which I succeeded on the death of my father, and I now am communicating this, my final and irrevocable decision."

In that epochal moment of eight centuries, the Commons, the people and the empire saw their government victorious in a tremendous constitutional struggle with a monarch who reigned for less than a year.

Rather than give up the twice-divorced American woman who waited today within the rail-enclosed walls of a villa on the Côte d'Azur, balked by state and church in his desire for marriage, Edward VIII this

BIG PUSH ON FOR CAPTURE MADRID CITY

Hot Fighting Now in Progress Along Spanish Front

MADRID, Dec. 10.—Socialist militiamen repelled an insurgent attack today, driving back the fascists in bitter fighting to control the bridges across the Manzanares river to the Spanish capital.

The long expected "big push" to capture Madrid developed along the entire northern line from the mountainous Castilians mountains to the north to Guadalajara in the east.

Under a barrage of artillery fire, the insurgents struck with sudden force, capturing the city of San Fernando, Pineda de Alarcón and Cuesta de Los Perdonces.

The infantry clashed with long range rifle and machine-gun fire before the fascist tanks, bombers, burst along the river line to the north-western front sectors.

Government command posts reported their half-fronted militiamen holding General Franco's fascists at bay.

CANADA FIRST DISCOVERED POPULAR PRINCE

A PRINCE THERE WAS

What Candid Camera Shows Of Edward as Prince

Canada First Discovered An Amazingly Popular and Active Prince of Wales.

NEVER was there a more popular or active Prince than the Prince of Wales. And it was in Canada that fact was first discovered.

When the Prince visited this country in 1919, he was an untitled, seldom heard-about Prince. True, he had been active in the war, but had always managed to keep out of the headlines. But his trip to Canada revealed a young man actively interested in the affairs of the Empire and at the same time a democratic youth who wanted only to be looked upon as an ordinary person.

Like most members of the royal family, he was possessed of amazing qualities of endurance and vitality. He seldom rests; if he is not airplaning, he is riding, playing polo, squash or golf, or perhaps he is dancing. One may even find him early in the morning out for a run or a brisk walk. He takes part in games not for any desire to win, or love for the game itself, but simply to keep himself in perfect physical condition and to placate that nervous desire to be always doing something. Even so as a king.

Perhaps his most notable exploits were in the field of horse racing. Invariably, it seems, he would fall—and often he was painfully injured. It became a byword. But he persisted until it became necessary to take some action to prevent anything serious happening. This also was necessary in the case of flying. The Prince can fly his own airplane, but he is not permitted to do so.

Pictures today show the Prince caught by the camera topping off his horse, and garbed for a flight. At that he is shown going over the head of his horse, the occasion being in September, 1928. (Below), one of the reasons why he was forbidden to take part in these races. This was taken after a fall in the same year. The photo of the Prince in flying top was taken during his wild dash from Africa during the serious illness of his father, King George. It was this illness that did much to quieten the activities of the Prince and cause him to settle down to more serious matters.

Here are some of the titled girls of Europe, each of whom rumor has named, at various times, as a possible bride for Edward. No. 1 is the beautiful Princess Irene of Romania. The others: No. 2, Princess Marie, the second daughter of Prince Carl of Sweden; No. 3, Princess Beatrice of Spain; No. 4, Princess Marie-Jose of Belgium; No. 5, Crown Princess Juliana of Holland; No. 6, Lady Anne, Wellesley, a leader in London society. To date, all of these rumors have remained rumors and nothing more.

Life of the Prince of Wales—In Pictures

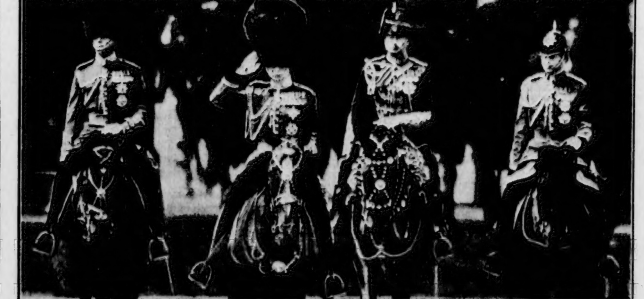

As Prince of Wales, Britain's new monarch hunted big game in Africa and India alike. This picture shows him and a group of companions with a fine Bengal tiger he had just shot. The Prince is in the center, with his helmet under his arm. . . . The sketch shows how the Prince was attacked unceremoniously by a big sailor aboard ship while helping "initiate" his royal brother at the equator.

He also visited the warlike native negro tribes like the Zulus and Basutos. At one place over 100,000 were in line. They danced their native dances. They made him one of themselves by their native decorations.

From South Africa he crossed the Atlantic to visit Uruguay and the Argentine. He delighted the leading men of Buenos Aires by making a little speech in Spanish. It was recognized he had done a lot of good for British business, which was being crowded out by the Americans. In 1927 he made a trip to Spain and thence to Canada.

Celebrating his forty-second birthday, King Edward VIII, second from the left, leaves Buckingham Palace with his three brothers as they attend the trooping of the colors at the Horse Guards' parade. Left to right are the Duke of York, the King, the Duke of Gloucester and the Duke of Kent.

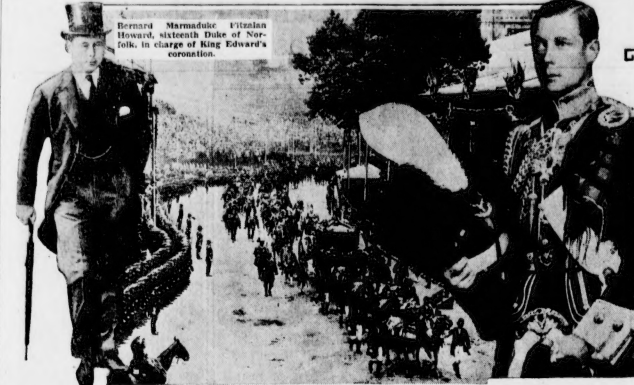

Here is an excellent example of King Edward and his brother, the Duke of York, her agent, as they received the Royal Air Force. Wearing his glasses and attired in R.A.F. uniform, he flew in the same airplane during the review. It was remarked at the time that a disastrous airplane crash might have made 19-year-old Prince Elizabeth a queen.

Duke and Duchess of Gloucester
Duke and Duchess of York
Duke and Duchess of Kent
In 1925 the world was asking: Is the Prince of Wales to be a queen's king? Is the Prince of Wales to take the throne of England with no heirs? The world tried to find an answer to these questions. Since the wedding of the second youngest son of the King and Queen of England it left only the Prince of Wales, the 42-year-old heir-apparent to the throne, unmarried in the British Royal Family. Prince Albert, the Duke of York, married Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon, daughter of the fourteenth Earl of Strathmore, in 1923. Prince George, the Duke of Kent, took as his bride the Princess Marina of Greece in 1934, and Prince Henry, the Duke of Gloucester, was married recently to Lady Alice Montagu-Douglas-Scott.

This picture, taken in Bombay, India, during the course of the Prince of Wales' goodwill tour of the Empire, shows the reception the heir to the throne was accorded there. In the inset is the Prince as he appeared on his ranch in Canada.

As a Clubman

Despite his love for the rough, hardy life of the jungles and plains, the Prince of Wales was at ease in the most decorous of social circles. Here he is, at the races.

Here is a recent picture of the Duke of York who today begins a reign as King of England in place of his brother, Edward. His popularity is said to be ever on the increase among the British peoples.

This residence in London's fashionable West End was the home of a woman who is the centre of world attention—Mrs. Wallis Simpson, high in the favor of King Edward VIII. The house at 16 Cumberland Terrace, Regent's Park, into which Mrs. Simpson moved at about the time she filed her divorce plea, was closely watched by detectives from the King's private guard.

An unconventional pose of His Majesty King Edward VIII, in a close-up made during the monarch's current vacation on the Bay of Mar-tinez. Sweater-shirt open at the throat and pipe clutched between teeth, Edward looks more like the "half-follies-wellcome" Prince of Wales than he is, instead of the austere ruler of Great Britain that he is.

The lobby at right of this Redemptorist is making it his business to see that the driver of the wagon at the curb moves on promptly, for there's no loitering allowed at this particular spot in London—No. 18 Cumberland Terrace, the new home of Mrs. Wallis Simpson. A sergeant and two constables patrol the vicinity, showing away curious and declaring the thoroughfare "crown property."

King Edward, wearing the uniform of an admiral of the fleet, pictured coming out of the colonnade lower hatch of the new submarine "Norwhal" after he had inspected its interior. The occasion was King Edward's review of the home fleet in Portland harbor.

FOUR WITH QUEEN MAKE COUNCIL OF STATE

The charm that has made her the favorite of King Edward VIII of England is revealed in this informal portrait of Mrs. Wallis Simpson, formerly of Baltimore, Md. This photo hints at one thing she may have in common with the King—a fondness for animals.

Propped up in bed in his sickroom at Sandringham, Norfolk, and too ill to handle the duties of state which devolve upon him as sovereign, the King signed an order appointing the Queen and her four sons a council of state to act for him during his illness. The privy council was summoned to Sandringham to arrange the appointments. The four Princes, who with their mother acted on behalf of His Majesty, are shown posed in formal attire. (Left to right) they are the Duke of Kent, the Prince of Wales, the Duke of York and Duke of Gloucester.

Here is another beautiful portrait study by Dorothy Wilding, of Prince George, youngest son of the King and Queen, and Princess Marina of Greece, who were married in Westminster Abbey, November 29, 1935. The ceremony was one of the most magnificent spectacles ever witnessed in London, with royal notables from every part of the world attending.

An excellent study of Mrs. Ernest "Wally" Simpson, in the flat at Bryanston Court, London, where she and her husband entertained King Edward VIII when he was Prince of Wales. Following her filing of suit for divorce, Mrs. Simpson left the flat and established a new residence in Cumberland terrace, less than a mile from Buckingham Palace.

A half dozen efficient bobbiners on duty outside the Cumberland Terrace home of Mrs. Wallis Simpson barred the way to all who attempted to interview her after first publication in London of news of her romance with King Edward VIII. Feet firmly planted, the policeman in this NEA radiophoto makes it clear that, though the bird had flown, no one would be permitted even to ring her doorbell.

The engagement of the Duke of Norfolk, premier duke of England, to the Hon. Lavonia Mary Strutt, only daughter of Baron Helper and the Countess of Hovebery, was announced recently. No date for the wedding was given, but it was thought it would take place after King Edward's coronation next May, since the Duke, in his capacity as Earl Marshal and Hereditary Marshal of England, will be occupied fully for the next five months with his duties. The Duke is shown with his fiancee (left background) at a meet of the Holderness Hunt, of which he is master, at Everington Park, Yorkshire.

Too heavy to be worn for long.

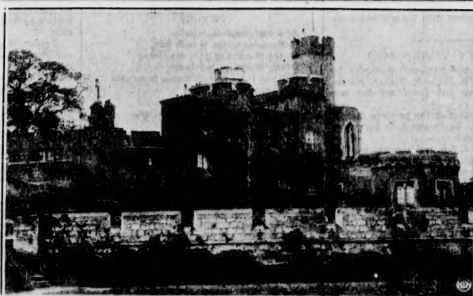

ERNEST SIMPSON

Here are most recent posed pictures of the family of the Duke and Duchess of York. The Duke is heir presumptive to the throne of Britain, and his beautiful daughter, Princess Elizabeth (right), who, ten years of age last April 21, is second in line of succession. Princess Margaret Rose (lower left) will be seven years old next August. The Duchess of York is shown (lower right).

Looking Them Over

Fire And Iron Landisology Tiring Of Grief

If supporters of the dictatorship theory should point out Kenease Mountain Landis, supreme commissioner of baseball, as a glowing example of the efficiency of dictatorship, we would have to smile and agree that there is no question as to the efficiency of the so-called dictator's regime. But now, however, there are rumblings and ominous clouds indicate that he may not be so long before his reign is over. There is no question as to the efficiency of the so-called dictator's regime. But now, however, there are rumblings and ominous clouds indicate that he may not be so long before his reign is over.

The first odd thing about this man is his name. He was born at Millvale, Ohio, November 26, 1886. His father was veteran of the Civil War and he named his son after Kenease Mountain in Georgia, where he had been wounded during the war.

After graduating from an excellent education, the natural years, Kenease went into the business of insurance for the northern Illinois in 1903 and retained it until 1912 when he voluntarily resigned from the bench. It was the firebrand of the bench during those years and when he was in the service of the insurance company, he was the first to go from the bench to the street. For instance in 1907, he found the Standard Oil Co. guilty of $1,400,000 in freight charges and the same year he found the Chicago & North Western guilty of $1,000,000 on each of the counts. This totaled $2,400,000—29 times the capital of the company at that time. The amount was never paid since the supreme court reversed his decision.

Cracks Down On I.W.W.

LANDIS was a famous publicist during the World War days and when the ring leaders of the I.W.W. came before him on charges of obstructing the country's war program, he went to work on them in earnest. He found 83 of the I.W.W. leaders guilty and sent them off to the prison farms. "The Big" Hagwood, leader of the organization, was given 10 years in jail, but he took it on the lam and escaped to Russia. When publication came in, Landis took the matter over to the federal court in Chicago. He accordingly issued warrants against and closed over 600 Chicago saloons, which brought materially in making one Al Capone into a big shot, although Landis had no intention of giving such aid. Several automobiles were made to bend him out of existence, but he was not even once time.

It was in 1914 that Landis first handed down a baseball decision. It was in the famous court effort of the outlaw Federal League to force a major league, reorganization, from the National and American.

Six years later, following the scandal that threatened baseball after the 1919 world series in which the Chicago White Sox were accused of "throwing" the games, Landis was offered the post of supreme commissioner of organized baseball, replacing a commission of three which had previously ruled the game.

Demands Dictator's Power

THE fiery judge demanded full and absolute power to run the game according to his interpretation of the rules and regulations and he put it—along with a salary of $42,500 per annum. In 1920 his contract was renewed for seven years with a salary increase to $60,000. However, he played ball with the boys and when the lean years of 1922 and 1923 came along, he cut his own pay to $40,000.

No sooner did he take over the helm of baseball, than he started to lay down in terms that even ball players could understand—lines and regulations. For example, he wanted every member of the scandal-tainted White Sox to resign, despite the fact that no guilt had been established against him. He figured the house had to be cleaned even beyond a suspicion.

His first big test of power came in 1921 when he fined Babe Ruth, Ben Meusel and Phil Porcello, members of the second string Yankees, for going on a barnstorming tour he had ruled against. What is more, he fined them their shares of the world series cut and the resulting uproar was deafening. But Landis made it stick even then on until the present time his rule has been absolute. The "Jewish" baseball of the 1919 scandal and he put it on a solid foundation.

From the Montreal meeting there came rumors that there was a growing tendency among the leagues to crown the Landis overlordship, while there is little doubt that the question of Landis' status may prove another bomb for the dictator when he delivers his judgment. The real truth of the matter though seems to be that at 70 years of age, he has become fed up on baseball bickering and wants to retire peacefully.

(Relative to Edmonton Goals)

DRUMHELLER, Dec. 10.—Lacking star defenceman Liston Anderson, who Saturday sustained a broken thumb in the minor initial encounter at Calgary in the Alberta Senior Six Series, A. B. Cook's Coal City sextette went down to defeat by a score of 3-1 in their return engagement against Rosie Helmer's Rangers here Wednesday night before a large fan crowd.

Perfect ice conditions made for a fast game, first period being scoreless and featured by close midline work.

The Moose aggregate, however, had a lead in the second period, but lacked the necessary finish, the Rangers scoring on a brilliant display of combination work but being stopped by Seaby.

With the second frame just past, Bill Wright and McPherson were retired for roughing it on the boards, Howe Bill soon following to the dugout, with Hansen, who had been working for the Moose, being substituted for him.

Nearly 150 officials and employees of the Canadian National Railways assembled in the Macdonald hotel Wednesday evening to attend a banquet in honor of A. E. Macdonald, superintendent of the Edmonton and Edmonton division of the railway for the past 13 years, whose retirement from active service is effective on December 11. Speakers of the evening all paid tribute to Mr. Macdonald, long and a most outstanding service to the company, stressing his ability to cooperate both with his superiors, and those under him. At the conclusion of the evening, he was tendered a series of gifts and a pass on the Vancouver Electric Railway. He will make his new home in the city.

MANY SPEAKERS

W. H. White, district engineer, who gave a brief report of Mr. Macdonald's tenure of office, his experiences in railroading since 1898, J. K. "He has the friendship of every man in the province," said Mr. Fallow. "He has the friendship of every man in the province, and he has the friendship of every man in the province."

REVENGE DEATH ENDS MONTREAL BANK ROBBER

Adam Parillo Found Dying On Streets Of New York

Town

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y., Dec. 10.—Vengeance, long planned, was believed by authorities last night to have been meted out to the slaying here yesterday of Adam Parillo.

Death of Parillo would another chapter in the long story resulting from the $142,000 holdup of the Banque D'Industrie money transfer car in an Ontario street tunnel in Montreal in April, 1935. Four men were hanged for murder of a bank messenger in the holdup.

EASILY TRACED

Sentenced to life imprisonment for his share in the crime, Parillo was released from St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary for deportation to the United States on September 23.

Apparently his enemies had no difficulty in tracing him here. He was found at the door of a hotel, bleeding and murmuring "help me." Left on the street by unidentified motorists, he died shortly after he was admitted to the institution. He had been struck by four bullets.

Police Chief Patrick Ross and District Attorney's officials said today they were "well getting where" in their investigation of the crime.

GETTING NOWHERE

Assistant District Attorney J. S. Doyle said that after he and his colleagues had questioned several persons they were "convinced" they were at a dead end.

Doyle said he had no idea where the slaying occurred or who was involved.

Chief Ross said he believed the crime "undoubtedly was murder" and that the motive was "vengeance, long back to back to the slaying after his discharge from a Canadian prison." Ross said "I had expected trouble."

Displaying keen interest in the commercial welfare of the city and expressing their resolve to contribute to its further economic development, a group of prominent young business and professional men met at a special meeting Wednesday night to form an active junior section of the Chamber of Commerce.

The meeting was held at the board room of the Chamber of Commerce, and was presided over by the president of the parent body, the men expressed a willingness to assist the Chamber in carrying out its varied responsibilities, and to bring to bear on all pressing economic problems the vision and courage that belongs to youth.

The members of the new section decided to form a committee to draw up plans for co-operation with the Youth Employment Commission. It was indicated that a survey will be undertaken to see what economic opportunities are now available for young people in Edmonton, and how they may be increased by concerted action.

The group proposed a tourist emblem, to be distributed to all city visitors in conjunction with the Alberta Motor Association and the Chamber of Commerce. In addition, the committee was authorized to make plans whereby the organization could assist in making safety prevail on city streets, and secure heightened protection for school children from the hazards of accidents.

The committee charged with drafting plans for the next meeting, to which all interested are cordially invited to attend, include H. L. Hamlin, J. J. Bricker, J. E. Walker, C. N. Macdonald, Gordon Smith, H. H. Hughes, Ben Lange, Miles Palmer.

FATS TARIFF STIRS STORM

OTTAWA, Dec. 10.—Small shrouds of controversy surrounding the presentation of the National Dairy Council for an increased tariff on vegetable oils for use in margarine, is a potential threat to the industry, is informative as to the history of the game and provides educational information for the public. The tariff is a measure to protect the Canadian dairy industry.

Excessively intended to apply to substitutes for lard used in the baking industry, and to stimulate the export of butter, the tariff is not so simple as it seems. It is a measure to protect the Canadian dairy industry.

Even religion was brought into the matter. H. C. Carl, president of the National Dairy Council, said that the tariff was a measure to protect the Canadian dairy industry.

RUSS GERMAN ENVOYS CLASH OVER SPAIN

Each Charges Other With Sending Troops To Civil War

LONDON, Dec. 10.—German envoys in Spain and what Soviet officers are fighting for the government cause were made at last in a clash of the envoys of the "Hands Off Spain" committee by German Ambassador Joseph von Ribbentrop.

Soviet Ambassador Ivan Maisky replied that 8,000 Italian and equipped German soldiers allegedly were fighting for the Spanish insurgents.

Germany and France meanwhile strove to win assurance from Berlin, Rome and Lisbon that these three governments would enter an agreement not to interfere in Spanish affairs.

An official note from Moscow promised Russia's support of this plan if the other powers also agreed to it.

An indication of Germany's support came from Van Ribbentrop, who told the committee "Germany fully supports" the appeal to check an influx of foreign volunteers to Spain.
